A NEW REAPPORTIONMENT.

CONGRESS MEST MAKE IT UNDER THE

No Prospect of Action at This Session on the Question of Reducing the Representation of Southern States That Have Disfranchised Negroes The Ratio of Representation and the Number of Representatives in Congress Will Both He Increased.

WARRINGTON, Nov 19 Among the interesting questions to be discussed at the coming reasion of Congress is that of a new reapportionment of Representatives in Congress and in the Electoral College, under the figures of the Twelfth Census, which, as recently promulgated, show the total population of the United State to Le 76 295,220 Under the law the election of Congressmen in November, 1962, must be held with these new census figures as a basis, and as the various States must have time in which to rearrange the Congress districts, it will be necessary that the passage of the new Re-apportionment bill shall not be delayed. It is possible that the Fifty-seventh Congress may not meet until the regular date on the first Monday in December, 1901, and there would hardly be sufficient time after that in which to pass a Reapportlonment law and set to work the machinery for the election of Reprecontatives on the new basis of representation. It is likely, therefore, that the approaching sersion of Congress will pass the necessary act.

During the discussion in the Senate and House the question of reducing the representation in Congress and to the Electoral College from those Southern States which disfranchised classes of their citizens will necessarily arise. It is impossible to state at the present time with any degree of accuracy what the sentiment of Congress is on the subject of punishing the South, or making it pay the price of derriving the negroes of their suffrage, but enough is known to make it certain that this cannot be without provoking a bitter party strife.

Judging from the opinions expressed by such members of the Senate and House as have arrived in Washington it is fair to say that however this burning colitical question will ultimately be settled, there is I ttle or no prospect of action by Congress on it at this session. Deducting the long holiday recess and Sundays, there will be burely two months' time before the 4th of March, when the Fifty-sixth Congress expires, and all of this will be required for the passage of the appropriation bills, and a discussion of the Nicaraguan Canal bill, the Army Reorganization bill, the Ship Subsidy bill, the proposed reduction of war tevenue taxes and other measures, which formally or informally have the right of way. Nothing that would arouse the determined opposition of either party can possibly be brought to a vote before the 4th of March, and it is certain that any proposition to reduce the representation from the Southern States which have disfran-is a radical Republican and a n an of influence in the House.

The opposite view is taken, of course, by Democrats generally, and particularly those from Southern States. This Representative Swanson of Virginia tooldy says: "I will fight any measure of this character as long as I remain in Concress. While I may not be able to death in the Senate. The Republicans should be warred by experience not to trainfle upon the South, for every time they have undertaken to do so they have suffered defent. The Scuth should be permitted to deal with the negroquestion as it sees fit and not to be dicated to by the North. The Senate is still quent of red defent, and we will talk the bill to death if nothing also can be done."

nothing else can be done."

Representative Dayton of West Virginia, a Republican but a Southern man, takes the opposite view and agrees with Hopkins. He says "While I am from the South and believe it it South, I must say that it looks unfair to me to see While I am from the South and believe it the South, I must say that I looks unfair to me to see has dful of voters elect a member of Congress none part of the United States and thousands he required in other States for the election of a member with no more power than the first. This car there were between $5,000 and $5,000 votes east in my district, while I venture to say that the total vote for the seven R tresentatives in Mississippi will fall below the number in my district. That does not seem fair, and while I should think the Republican party would galow in any matter of this knd, if the leaders make up their minds to bass such a half I believe that it will ass and that it will be little more than ris t.

discussion of the question may take a wide range. At present the basis of representation bused on the population statistics of the bused on the population statistics of the leventh tensus is one for resentative to each 12,301 of population, and under the new law the ratio and the number of feerence of optision as to what basis should be adopted, and course three or four States each to lose one feerence, however, for the feason that while it has always been regarded innormate to keep the total member out of office. It has, the efore, been flaured out by some statistic and that an equitable basis would be adopted that would legislate a member out of office. It has, the efore, been flaured out by some statistic and that an equitable basis would be 195,177 Virginia would lose one, and at 196,190 Mains would fall below its present repleased that would labelow its present repleased that would also one, and at 196,190 Mains would be below its present repleased that would be taken, the basis of 194.345 should be taken, the If the basis of 194 345 should be teken, the total membership would be increased by thirty making it 387 xelusive of the Territorial Delegates, and the total of the filectoral College would be 477, making 229 verse secossary to a choice in the election of a President. On this brais also New York, Illinois and Texas would each gain three Representatives, Pepnsylvania, New Jersey and Minnesota two, and Aricassa, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Louisana, Massachusetts, Masiasippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin each one, making the total increase of thirty.

CIGARETTE DECISION.

The Supreme Court Holds That a State Cannot Prohibit Their Importation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 - The Supreme Court of the United States, in an opinion delivered to-day by Justice Brown, held that cigarettes were legitimate articles of interstate commerce and reversed the decision of the Supreme Court of Tennessee, upholding the legality of the law of that State prohibiting the importation of cigarettes. By a divided beach the Court affirmed the decision of the Tennessee Supreme Court that the paper boxes containing ten cigarettes are not original packages within the meaning of the law, as they were not the packages in which cicarettes were usually transported from one State to another. As soon as the original boxes were opened and the small paper boxes taken out the latter ceased to be original packages and were subject to the State law. Chief Justice Fuller and Justices Brewer.
Shiras and Peckham dissented, holding that Congress under the Constitution was vested with full control over interstate commerce. Justice Brown said the sole question presented was whether or not the Tennessee law prohibiting the importation or sale or digarettes was an infringement upon the exclusive power of Congress to regulate commerce between the States. The Surreme Court of Tennessee upheld the constitutionality of the law on the ground that digarettes were not legitimate articles of commerce. This court, Justice Brown said, was not prepared fully to indorse that opinion. Whatever product had from time immemorial been recognized by custom or law as a fit subject for barter and sale, particularly if its manufacture had been made the subject of Federal regulation and taxation, must be recognized as a legitimate article of commerce, although it might to a certain extent be within the police power of the States. Of this class of cases was tobacco.

The Court to-day took the usual fall recess of two weeks and will again convene on Monday, Dec. 3. Chief Justice Fuller and Justices Brewer.

When Senator Hanna was asked which of the measures he would take special interest in he said: "I do no expect to have any set measures this winter, but will probably take as much interest in the Ship Subsidy bill as in any. This is an important measure and ought to be passed. It means much to the commercial prosperity of this country, and there is not an important line of industry that is not crying

It is not to be understood that these measures are to be disposed of in the order named, but the indications are that they will all be passed before the adjournment on March 4. This has been the programme of the Republican leaders ever since election day, and there is substantial unanimity among them. There is somedifference of opinion on two or three matters, particularly as to whether the reapportionment bill should be accompanied by a provision for cutting down the representation of the South, what the amount of the war revenue reduction ought to be, how large an army should be provided, and whether the Nicaragua Canal bill should be passed before or after the treaty is ratified by the Senate and a contract made between this government and those of Nicaragua and Costa a rear room on the top floor. MANICURE GETS A BURGLAR

HAS NERVE. Wasn't Going to Have Her Rooms Rabbed Twice if She Knew It - Met an Intruder on the Stairs and Collared Him Forced Him

Miss Deicle V. Walker, a manicure and hairdresser, who lives at 286 West Seventieth street. refused yesterday, as she put it, to have her apartments robbed twice in one year, so the West Sixty-eighth street police had with them last night a youthful prisoner, who says he is Miss Walker is not a robust-looking person, but the police say she has nerve enough to make up for lack of strength. She lives on the top floor of the apartment house and one day last May as she was going upstairs she met three young men coming down. One of them was smoking a cigarette and he politely asked to be excused as he passed her. When Miss Walker looked over her flat a few minutes later she discovered that $25 and some brica-brac and jewelry had been stolen.

Yesterday morning Miss Walker went downstairs to a friend's flat who lives just under her. She was away enly a few minutes. When she opened the door of her friend's apartment and stepped into the hall she glanced upstairs and stepped into the hall she giaheed upsturs and saw the face of young Scheyer—if that's his name—peering anxlously over the balusters. Miss Walker started up the stairs and the young man started down.

"What do you want? What were you doing up there?" she asked as they met.

"Nothin," mumbled the young man.
Miss Walker put her hand very firmly on the young man's coalar.

"Yes, you were," she said. "Now, what do you want here, anyway? You've no business up here."

"Lemme go," said Scheyer, essaying a start "Lemme go," said Scheyer, essaying a start downstairs.

"You'll stay here," said the young woman. "I'll make you. Get down on your knees and stay there."

Scheyer got down. Several other tenants came to Miss Walker's assistance and the lanitor was despatched for a policeman. When he returned with Detective Denohue the young man was pleading to be released and was telling large parts of the story of his life with poor-old-mother and me-a-starving-on-the-streets accompaniments, all in a minor key. He said then that he was looking for work, and a "friend outside" had told him that Miss Walker wished to hire a young man.

Donohue escorted Miss Walker to the West Side police court and Scheyer went in the back way under escort of a policeman. Miss Walker told Magistrate Meade how she had captured the prisoner, and said she thought she recognized him as one of the three young men she had met on the stairs when her dat was robbed before. Scheyer was remanded back to the folice station, and the detective was sent to Police Headquarters to see if the sleuths there knew anything of the young man.
